

Planning and Creating Your Maternity Portraits

Initial Consultation

Creating a maternity portrait begins with this first meeting at our studio. It is a fun, creative, and relaxing. Together we plan how the portrait will look, the feeling it will convey. During this initial consultation we get to know each other. We will discuss styles of images, clothing and ambiance. At the end of your consultation we will schedule your portrait session and set your appointment.

Your Portrait Session

We suggest you schedule the photography session on a day you are well rested and not very busy. That way you will arrive for the session looking your best, feeling relaxed, and ready to create very special and artistic images of your pregnancy.

Our pregnancy portrait sessions are done in a comfortable, homelike, and unhurried atmosphere.

Because we meet with and work with clients by appointment, our creative photography sessions are completely private and uninterrupted by ringing phones. This is your quiet time - yours to enjoy the process of creating art that celebrates your pregnancy.

The length of the session depends on the nature of what we are creating for you. Our typical session lasts one hour but may take longer if you want to create a maternity photo album.

We suggest you bring not only the clothing you've selected for your portrait, but an alternate clothing change as well.

If very young children are going to be part of your maternity portrait session, don't forget to bring a toy, some books, or other fun distractions to amuse them during times when we are photographing just you.

Image Presentation

Choosing just the right image is a fun experience! Sit back and relax as we review your images on a large screen.

Photographs are view at the session everyone who is a part of the decision making process need to be at this appointment.
